(6). TITLE.- SPORT IN GERMANY.

Picture.- Twenty-five thousand people crowd into the Stadium for the Nurmi athletic festival.

Off ! for the fifteen hundred metres flat race. Go it, lads !

The little fellow sets the pace for some of the bigger chaps, and a hot pace it is too.

However, the Frenchman wins, easily.

His time was three minutes 53 seconds.

The big thrill for the crowd was the 5000 metres.

Off! go a dozen fine runners, including the famous Nurmi -- known as the Flying Finn. Here he shows how he got that nickname. Keep it up, sir ! You've got them all at a standstill.

There's no need to look round for the others ! You've got it all on your own; but keep going -- for you never know what might happen. Nothing unforeseen occurs and the Flying Finn wins as he likes!

(7). TITLE.- HEALTH IS WEALTH.

Picture.- These kiddies come from all over London to indulge in their love of the open air.

If you do this before going to bed in winter time, you will never feel the chill of the sheets. So say these youngsters -- and it sounds sensible.

These exercises are carried out whatever the weather may be. The sun is, of course, welcomed, but if King Sol is not there, they simply mark him absent, and carry on Doctors' bills are few and far between where these youngsters are concerned.

They will still be doing this kind of thing when the trees are bare and snow lies on the ground.
