(6). TITLE.:- SENTINEL OF THE SEA.

Picture.:- It stands in a desolate spot far away from anywhere, but in spite -- --of the loneliness of their job the keepers are quite a jolly bunch of men.

Principal Keeper Pell gazes with far-seeing eyes over the big stretch of shingle towards the sea.

On the other sides, it's nothing but shingle for miles and miles.

The clockwork apparatus which revolves the great lamp is wound up every hour after dusk.

This keeps it going at a uniform rate, throwing its bright beam --

--through the hundreds of prisms, far out to sea, carrying its message of warning to ships that pass in the night. Round and round it goes, under the watchful eyes of the keepers.

For who knows what might happen if the looked-for light were to fail ?

We hear little enough of the vigilant guardians of our coast--

--who are widest awake when most of the world is wrapt in slumber.

(7). TITLE.:- AN HONOURED GUEST.

Picture.:- New York knows how to welcome illustrious visitors.

A salute of thirteen guns is fired from Fort Jay in honour of --

--this splendid old Soldier of France, General Gouraud, the Military Governor --

--of Paris. He won great respect and admiration during the wartime years.

A fire-float joined in the welcome to the General --

--who was received by Mayor Walker at the City Hall.

The one-armed campaigner is in New York to represent France at the American League convention.
