TITLE.:- TRIBAL FESTIVITIES.

Picture.:- Continuing his tour of Morocco M. Doumergue arrives at djebel-Hebrid where he attends --

--a fête by the Berber tribe. The women open the proceedings with a native dance, to the music of tambourines. Not exactly thrilling -- but it's their idea of a dance.

The President and his party are then treated to a display --

--of warlike manoeuvres by thousands of Berber cavaliers, the warriors of the tribe. They are honoured --

--that their great White Chief should show interest in their doings, and accordingly put up a display which would have done credit to many a regular cavalry regiment.

The great ride past of the tribesmen makes a very striking picture, thrilling the President and other spectators.

The display closes with a spectacular "Charge" -- always a fine sight when carried out by these wonderful horsemen of the desert.

TITLE.:- HIS OLD VARSITY.

Picture.:- Sir James won't say how long ago it is since he graduated at Edinburgh, but by his appearance it couldn't have been very long ago !

The students give him a very warm welcome -- er, pardon me, Sir, your mortar-board's crooked. That's better ! And now for a group picture with some of the students of to-day

Sir James welcomed the number of women now at the 'varsity.

Later he just had to submit to being chaired, just as many other illustrious Chancellors have been chaired -- and cheered -- before him. Apparently he thoroughly enjoyed the experience.

Probably many of the students present are wondering if it will --

--ever be their fortune to be chaired under similar circumstances
