

J-F28F81
J-528F81

67

TITLE.:- PRINCE GEORGE AT BRIGHTON.

Picture.:- Everybody at Brighton College is delighted at the honour conferred on them by the Prince's visit.

His object is to open a new wing on the southern side of the quadrangle.

A guard of honour of the college cadets are first inspected by His Royal Highness --

--whose visit is gratefully appreciated by Canon Dawson, who--
--has been the respected Head of the College for twenty-five years.

The Royal visitor then proceeds to the object of his visit, the opening of the college extension. The turn of a key -- and, there comes into immediate usefulness further accommodation for the famous seat of learning. The boys seem --

--happy at the Prince's visit -- or perhaps lessons were "off" for the day.

(7).

TITLE.:- FACTORY EXPLOSION.

Picture.:- Nobody knows how it happened, but what they do know is that hundreds of workers narrowly escaped being involved in the blast. It occurred at 7.26 in the morning, only four minutes before nearly a thousand people were due to start work.

The explosion happened on one of the lower floors of the twelve story building--

--and it's a little short of a miracle that --

--the whole structure didn't collapse. As it is, damage--

--is estimated at a million dollars, including about a tenner for this !

Some of the workers who found their jobs literally blown away !--

--and some of the empty desks and benches they would be occupying --

--but for this big and very mysterious explosion which injured fifty-two people.

It only just missed being an appalling tragedy.