TITLE.:- ARMISTICE DAY.

Picture.:- It is the eleventh anniversary of that eleventh day of the eleventh month of 1918 when the guns of war were silenced at the eleventh hour !

Britain remembers those who died in defence of her honour during those terrible years.

His Majesty leads the nation in its homage to Our Glorious Dead.

King and Commoner are as one,
Indeed,
In homage to those who fell
For Britain's need.

It is two years ago to-day that His Majesty fell ill, some thought from a chill contracted --

--at the Armistice Day service of that year; but this does not deter him from again paying homage, with thousands of his subjects, to those brave men who sacrificed their all for the land that gave them birth. Fortunately the weather is fine.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in turn, lays his tribute at the foot of the Cenotaph which means so much to all of us who are left.

Then, as the hour of eleven o'clock approaches, all sounds die away -- and a nation's heart stands still.

(S I L E N C E).

What more impressive tribute to a nation's heroes can one imagine than this ?

A great service of Remembrance, lead by the First Gentleman in the Land--

--and attended by thousands who remember. All creeds unite, political and social differences are forgotten, while King and Commons,--

--Prince and Peasant pay due homage to those who made a Covenant with Death. Not in our time must this annual tribute be allowed to lose its firm place in the heart of the nation.

So let us endorse those beautiful words of Laurence
Binyon --

They shall not grow old as we that are left grow old;
Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn;
At the going down of the sun and in the morning
We will remember them.
