

(9). TITLE.:- HIGH SEAS.

Picture.:- In dirty weather she gets her real test, and she makes 17 knots. A remarkable performance under these conditions. As she cuts through the water at speed, one wonders how her crew survive the buffetings they must get --

--at such a time. She looks as though she could give a fairly good account of herself if need be. May she never be called upon to do so.

She holds the world's record for diving, for she went down no less than 332 feet - and, came up again. Others, sad to say, have gone down even more, but it's been their last dive. The V.5. is again put to the test, and she goes on a short return trip to Davy Jones' locker. It's a life of ups and downs for the officers and crew. Let's hope the number of "downs" never exceeds the "ups".

Down and down she goes. It's an official test of the submarine which gives all round satisfaction to the authorities.

Jelly good luck to you, V.5, and to all who sail in you.
