

119 ft - 18 ft = 137 ft

TITLE.: JACK, THE HANDY MAN.

Picture.:- They're all due to leave the navy, and return to civil life, soon. So they are all eager to learn --

--something, by which they can earn a living, when they become --

--landlubbers once more. Off they go at the double when ordered to their jobs, which are many and varied at this school.

Some want to know all about the latest motor cars,--
--possibly with a view to becoming chauffeurs or bus-drivers presently.

Others prefer a quiet life with pigs to feed and look after. Perhaps they think of the roast-pork --

--they used to dream about -- er, when the sea wasn't rough.

Chicken-rearing attracts some. An egg-shellent (excuse me) excellent, idea after years at sea.

After a course at the school, one could take on almost any job on a farm, but not all of them prefer such peaceful pursuits.

Plumbing is a line taken up by many. We would rely on them coming "at the double" to attend to a burst pipe !

And it seems as though
By ~~the look of this,~~ they' ll know how to repair it too !

Carpentry,
Cabinet and furniture making, French polishing, and ~~carpentering~~, all have their followers among the Jack Tars who don't want to go.--

--go on the dole when they leave the Navy. Who knows, perhaps, when they get down to it, --

--after ~~making~~ bricklaying, etcetera, some of them might set about building their own places --

--and, perhaps, live in the house that Jack built.