TITLE:- DOWN IN DOCKLAND.

Pictures:- These are busy times in the timber docks. ...
Big cargoes of wood from Canada and --

--South America are coming in, and men are hard at it, all the time, unloading and stacking what seems -- --to be a large part of the forests of the world.. ...

They handle two million tons a year.

... The men make light of their task of humping --

--the timber for stacking, and get --

--very expert at "walking the plank", as they call this part of the job. It looks as though "Spring -- --Heeled Jack" had nothing on these fellows ! ... It's spring-time all the time for them ! ... There are 148 --

--acres of sheds in these docks, filled with every kind of timber.

Bulk timber for constructional purposes must be well seasoned, so it is formed into rafts --

--and left floating. ... Yes, they're busy "Down in Dockland". ... That's good to know !
