

(5). TITLE:- CYCLISTS V. HARRIERS.

Picture:- The runners get away quicker than the cyclists, who take a little while to get speeded up. ...

Before long though, the wheelers gain the lead, for the first part of the race is on the road. ... The harriers reserve --

--themselves for - hullo ! - a "beefy" runner ! - rougher parts of the course. ... Here's where they get a chance of "pulling back" their rivals. ... The harriers are over and gone while the cyclists struggle with their bikes.

Off the road, the "foot-sloggers" have the advantage particularly at such places as this !

Gate-crashing takes on a new meaning here - with the harriers still ahead ! ... Keep it up, boys ! ... Over come the bikes and - huh ! I bet that's a borrowed one ! ... Buck up, you chaps ! ; they're --

--all behind like a boarding-house dinner ! ... A harrier wins ! He's --

--Grimby of Southgate, and looks as though it's taken it out of him !
