

25 P 21

(7). TITLE:- GREATEST LAKE.

Picture:- A six-million pounds dam. Reminds me of when father laid the carpet,-----

No ! this dam is to stop a flow ! It imprisons the waters of the river in the valleys, --

--so that electric power may be furnished over an area of hundreds of miles.

It is a tremendous mass of cement and steel of incalculable strength.

9 It will complete a lake of ninety-seven billions of cubic feet of water - and if you want to know what that looks like, write down ninety-seven, and add noughts till they run off the paper !

A regular little town has sprung up around this great triumph of engineering.

It has most of the amenities of its bigger brothers.

There's a general store, complete with post-office, a restaurant, --

--and, oh ! look what's here ! TALKIES ! Open Sundays, too !