

(4). TITLE:- FIGHTING FIFTH.

BRING UP "BRITISH GRENADIERS" AS BAND APPROACHES and FADE SLOWLY OUT AT END OF SHOT.

.....'T'is such men as these who made British military history.

Their "Drummers' Colour" represents glory of a-hundred-and-sixty-nine years ago. ....

The G.O.C. Northern Command and the Colonel of the Regiment attend the ceremony, --

--which is carried out with that splendid precision always displayed by the Northumberland Fusiliers - to give them their proper name.

The "Quick Troops" follows - an entirely smart affair. .... To-day the regiment "troops the colours" for the hundred-and --

--sixtieth time. .... Here they are being handed over by the Captain of Number One Company to Subalterns of Number Two. .... One simply cannot fail to appreciate the dignified manner of handling these treasured symbols of British military glory. .... All honour to them, for they mean so much.

The badge of the Fighting Fifth is St. George and the -- --Dragon - it having been adopted when they took rank as the First English Regiment, at the Hague, in -- --1675. .... This no doubt explains why St. George's Day is selected for this picturesque ceremony.