(3). TITLE.:- "UP" FOR THE SHOW.

Picture.:- The sturdy pit pony "pulls his weight" over a quarter of a mile below ground.

They are even stabled right down here, in specially ventilated and warmed stables. Some of them are --

--"brought up", in more senses than one - for they are going to London to take part in the International Show at Olympia.

You'd think they knew all about the holiday treat in prospect for them. They'll be in good company, too, for they will be --

--surrounded by some of the world's finest thoroughbreds. We call them ponies, but they are healthy and hefty enough for first class farm horses. Their's is a "low down" job. --

--but one which by no means "gets them down". This fine chap proves it !
