Hands across the sea clasped again when the memory of the late Field Marshal Earl Haig was, honoured at Montreuil-sur-Mer by the unveiled of an equestrian statue.

Monsieur Maginot, Minister of War, arrives to take the chief part in the ceremony. / Thousands of the French population crowded into the Market Square to offer their respects and reverence to the great dead .

Here are Marechal Petain and Lord Jellicoe who silently salute the spirit of the great soldier.

Lady Haig, the brave and public spirited widow of the late Commander-in-Chief lays a wreath at the foot of the statue/whose features are so firm in her memory.

Perhaps many of these soldiers recal the famous order of their beloved Commander " With our backs to the wall and believing in the justice of our cause each one of us ~~might~~ must fight to the end. ~~The~~-freedom of our homes --

--and the safety of mankind depend alike upon the conduct of each one of us at this critical moment."

Let us all salute his memory!
