

215851

TITLE:- TENNIS.

Pictur. 1- Urged by the wonderful weather, crowds go to Wimbledon to see the quarter finals.

The match which draws so much attention is that between H.W. Austin, England, on the left, --

--better known as "Bunny" Austin, and F.X. Shields representing America on the right.

Here we see the giant American serving to Austin. After a short rally Austin finds the net.

His opponent is certainly moving him about a bit. It must be very tiring in the blazing sun.

Austin serves to Shields. They are both playing a splendid game. After a tricky return or two Shields with a magnificent chop baffles Austin and scores again.

The audience begins to feel the excitement of this very even battle between the players.

Up to this point Austin has been playing a remarkable game but having lost the match point, he also seems to lose his confidence and nerve. It also seems that the strain of the closely fought match has sapped his power of fighting back. Consequently Shields wins the set and match.

A deserving victory but disappointing for one of Britain's hopes. Now we shall have to bear our souls in patience and put our trust in F.J. Perry. Bad luck, Bunny, you certainly put up a game fight !

Bravo Shields, One step nearer to taking home the championship !