

138005-2

(5).

TITLE.:- THE FLEET'S IN.

Picture.:- Forty ships of the Atlantic Fleet make an imposing spectacle as they anchor in Torbay for the annual regattas. Mr. Taxpayer gets a chance to see some of Britain's Might for which he helps to pay. It's a strange --

--thought that that odd couple of bob on your income-tax demand probably paid for a --

--rivet or two in one of these mighty vessels. The fleet flagship "Nelson" is now in dock, so "Rodney" has the distinction of carrying the flag of the Commander-in-Chief (Admiral Sir Michael Hodges) for the time being.

"Hood", the famous battle-cruiser, is there with a sea-plane perched up on her newly installed catapulting device. ... Big ships can now carry their own scouting 'planes - a splendid idea!

Undersea craft are there, too. Each flock of four submarines nestling alongside the parent ship, like chicks under the wings of a hen.

BRING UP RULE BRITANNIA TO FULL STRENGTH
AS COMMENTATOR FINISHES - & FADE AT END OF PICTURE.