

(M). TITLE.:- NIGHT LIGHTS.

Picture. :- Londoners saw Westminster Abbey in a new light when the structure was bathed by powerful flood-lights, by way of "dress rehearsal" for the Triennial Illumination Congress in September.

Nearby, Big Ben presented a very unusual picture to the vast crowds who turned out to see these night-lights of London. By the way, that light at the top of the tower indicates that the House is still sitting.

The Queen Victoria Memorial, opposite Buckingham Palace, was much admired, in its new brilliance, by His Majesty, --

--and thousands of his subjects, who forsook their radios and other amusements to gaze on, and marvel at, the new and beautiful light, bright, London-by-night.