TITLE.:- BOYS OF THE R.A.F.

Picture. :- The Chief of the Air Staff inspects the boys when they pass out of the School of Technical Training at Halton They are now to be drafted to regular squadrons throughout the country You may be sure they wont "let those squadrons down", for they are already highly trained, and capable of taking on a real "job of work" right away.

This is "good-bye to schooldays" for nearly five-hundred of them, but I expect that most of them are rather glad to now be classified as men Its a step up, and what's the Air Force for, if not to help its men up? Good luck to every one of them May their lives in the Royal Air Force be all plane sailing.
