

(7).

TITLE:- SHEEP DRIVE.

Picture:- These pictures were taken near the waterfalls at Lan - Clan - oh ! --

--this place ! Got it ?

Prettier than its name - isn't it ?

It is time for their annual bath, so they are rounded up --

--by the thousand and driven to the place where the dipping operation is to be carried out.

There are over three millions of them altogether, and the law says they must all have a bath, once a year, --

--in a mixture of arsenic and other germ destroying ingredients. The idea is to --

--keep "at bay" the various vermin and diseases which are likely to attack them, without this precaution.

They are driven into the pens, and each one is --

--examined to see that it bears a brand-mark.

They can't get out of it, they have got to have their bath !

Care is taken to see that they are thoroughly immersed, and that the germ-destroying solution soaks well into the fleece--

--before they are allowed to scramble out of the bath. You may be sure they're glad --

--it's over - just as glad as a young gentleman I know, who just hates Saturday nights !

And now they are free till next year - unless they become mutton in the meantime !