TITLE.:- ZEPPELIN.

Picture.:- Some of us will remember the time when the mere whispering of the word "Zeppelin" sent --

--lots of people into cellars, others into Underground Railway stations and a --

--few into hysterics ! But the visit of the Graf Zepp was --

--quite a different affair ! On this occasion, as the big ship came down --

--she got the "glad hand" from a landing-crew of a couple of hundred men, and a great welcome from the crowd.

It took about fifteen tons of humanity to hold her down...
The veteran--

--commander, Doctor Eckener, obviously was pleased with the--

--warmth of the reception accorded him and his airship.

The giant vessel took over a score of passengers for a trip over Britain meeting every kind of weather--

--on the way, but Doctor --

--Eckener and his crew are used to weathering storms, so nobody had the "wind up".

When finally the mighty aerial charabans took her departure she had a cheery send-off from the crowds.

She took back more than she came with, for, besides the fares paid for --

--the round-Britain tour, she picked up two or three --

--tons of good honest rain-drops from our summer skies !

Doctor Eckener doesn't need a motto - but if he did, what about "Watch your Zepp !"
