TITLE.:- HARVEST TIME.

Picture.:- The seas harvest has to be gathered in - so let us take a trip--

--together in the "Ko'panes", the latest trawler out of Hull. XXXX
The weather is not too bad,--

--and our friends the fishermen are hoping for a good haul. XXXX
Well - - to business !

Overside go the great nets which are to gather in the-- --silver harvest. XXXX Meantime we experience a dose of heavy weather, which, as likely as not, would prove that we're not--

--exactly truthful when we say we are good sailors ! XXXX But to the crews of these trawlers, it is nothing. They don't think it's dirty until the boat stands on her nose !

And now, Heave ! Ho !. They "haul the trawl". XXXX A glance--

--over the side shows that it's going to be a pretty good day's work ! XXXX That's "some" cod - and no "kid". XXXX

The trawlers derrick completes the job, and it's a case of "all aboard" for England, home, and the dinner table ! XXXX
There are a--

--lot of "second courses" here - and they look as though they don't like it very much !

Now everybody sets to work to clean the fish ready for the-- --markets at home. XXXX It is a rather lengthy process, but it's got to be done ! XXXX Some of the-- --fish are of a size to make amateur anglers disbelieve their own fish tales ! XXXX

The "innards" are thrown overboard, with the result that hundreds of gulls appear, as--

--it were "out of nowhere", and enjoy what is possibly their first square meal for a long time.

They are greedy creatures, but so would we all be if we lived as they live.

And now the trawler has all she can carry. Her kind of "dumping" will be welcome when she reaches port !
