LEARNING TO GLIDE - New school for novices opened at Plaisir Grignon, near Paris.

---

Picture:- Gliding is not cheap, but the thrill is worth the money. One has to be sporting about it, because there's a sporting chance of a sudden drop with a nasty jar at the end of it.

Having no engine, these gliders are launched by means--

--of a motor-car specially adapted for the purpose.

Here is another one taking its flight at this Plaisir Grignon school for beginners. Makes a good landing too!

The pupils flying these machines are being trained to take part in important meetings next spring. Yet another takes the air, and the chance--

--of staying up, - - or not - - as the case may be. Well, his luck is holding at the moment. Oh! Good flying!
It looks easy, but there's lots of air knowledge and skill required to do this! Stout fellow! He's come down the right side up!

O-o-oh! Who wouldn't be an instructor? He's got his feet on the ground, but he might fall at any moment.
