Picture:- The cry of "Any old bottles, rags or bones ?" assumes a new--

--significance nowadays. This broken glass from bottles is used for silk making.

It's alright, ladies ! Don't be nervous about breaking your frocks !

They are not making dresses of it yet ! There are the old bottles after having been transformed into beautiful glistening white threads, spun as fine--

--as fine silk. Glass-silk it is called ! One of these girls is wearing it as a scarf !

It is made up into mattresses, and used as insulation for heat and sound. It's use is said to greatly reduce the cost of raising--

--steam in boilers and is now popular with locomotive and ship's engineers. A new British industry--

--with good prospects for development. A new business made possible by the scientist.

A romance of the old broken bottle ! Now, Mr. Inventor ! What can you make of my old razor blades ?
