

AN EPIC OF THE SNOWS - White men rescue
Indian band trapped by raging blizzard.

-Atargne, U.S.A.-

Picture. :- One of the most dramatic episodes in the history of the American Indian. The rescue party led by white men arrive-

--at the scene just in time to save some of the Indians still alive. It is an epic tragedy of-- --the last frontier. Trapped by one of--

--the worst blizzards in the history of the South West, many Indians are frozen--

--to death, unable to make their way out of the snow drifts, which wiped out--

--the trail. Poor souls, lost while they were gathering the tiny Indian nuts--

--that bring them in almost their only income. The heroic rescuers took terrible chances to bring out both the living and--

--the dead, high up in the Sooni Hills--

--in the shadow of Thunder Mountain. Only a few were-- --brought back. Hundreds still lie there, dead, with-- --their families and belongings as silent company. Slowly--

--the little procession winds its way down to the trading--

--post of Manvotto. The Indians are grateful--

--to the white men, but they weep for their families who--

--sleep for ever on Thunder Mountain.
