

A DANGEROUS TASK - Spring cleaning the huge groups of figures surmounting the Victor Emanuel II memorial in Rome.

Picture:- Despite the blue Italian skies, the statues of Rome collect much dirt. This--

--impressive monument to King Victor Emanuel II is given a yearly--

--wash-and-brush-up ! Reminds one of Gulliver--

--in the land of giants ! One kick and that man hits a star !

This horse is 50 feet high. Doesn't seem to be anybody in !

The two groups are made from cast bronze, and each weighs 150 tons. No--

--danger of thieves stealing them in the night.

They are erected 270 feet from the ground, and if--

--a cleaner slipped it would, in all probability, mean death.

A little wider, please ! It won't hurt !

A ticklish job ! When I'm in Rome, I shan't do as those Romans do !
