

INTERNATIONAL RUGBY - H.R.H. The Prince of Wales
sees Wales defeat England at Swansea.

-Glamorgan-

Picture.:- The English team look hopeful about the game which fifty-thousand people are--

--waiting to see, and so do the Welsh - but they can't both win.

The Prince of Wales arrives to see this international match, and shakes--

--hands with all the players of both sides,--

--Wales coming last, but by no means least.

The crowd is tremendous and both teams receive a great ovation,--

--and a bigger one as the game increases--

--in speed. The play is very one-sided for a match of this--

--importance. Welsh players show superiority both individually and as a team.

Boon, the Cardiff wing-man gains the huge crowd's approval for magnificent play throughout the match. English attacks seldom break through the Welsh line, although their defence gives Wales lots--

--to think about. But Wales won, look you ! Twelve points to five !
