

"MOUNTIES" OF THE MIDLANDS - Birmingham mounted police train their horses for almost any emergency.

-Warwickshire-

Picture. 1- One might call these the Police Cavalry.
Their efficiency is--

--very high indeed, and there are few things they cannot-- --do. It is more difficult to jump a rope than a fence.

A number of these men received experience in crack--
--cavalry regiments, which is all to Birmingham's advantage. Probably this is not the only--

--fire ordeal they have braved. Ah ! He doesn't like it, even now !

The animals are so well trained that-- --they can take their riders upstairs to bed. Up several flights--

--too. Of course the officers can walk if they want to.
