

THE GOLD RUSH - Jewellers working overtime to handle great rush to sell gold "for the sake of the old country".

-London-

Picture.:- A new style of 'Gold Rush! England is a-- --newly discovered Klondyke. Gold is being brought out from all sorts of unlikely places-- --and sold at huge profits. Men and women dip in their-- --old jewel cases and unearth treasure which was-- --almost forgotten. The high prices ruling for this precious metal--
--tempts thousands to sell all sorts of gold articles.
Even a ducal Coronet and an Ascot Gold Cup are said to have been turned into crisp crinkling notes. Most people sell for the profit in the deal. Others, under-- --financial pressure have disposed of sentimental trifles, blinking--
--back a tear before letting them go; the lash of necessity proving more painful than the reproach--
--of a memory. With the exception of rare antique pieces, the gold is thrown into the melting pot,--
--reduced to solid bars of metal and sold-- --to the Continent. Even this little chap has something to sell. Is the sale a joke or a tragedy to the shy-- --elder waiting outside? I wonder! It's a real golden harvest, anyway!
