KING'S VISIT TO THE HOME FLEET.

Picture.:- The guns of the Home Fleet thunder to the heavens a salute to His Majesty the King. On--

--his yacht "Victoria & Albert" he makes his royal progress down the lines of Britain's ships--

--of war. Softened by a gossamer veil of mist, the low lying vessels take on a half shadowy quality, making their grandeur ominous. Fifty warships valued at sixty million pounds, carrying names which have made Britain's naval prowess the wonder of the world, dress and man ship as the King passes under the guns.

KING'S VISIT TO THE HOME FLEET. At Weymouth.

Picture.:- At night powerful searchlights weavefantastic-- --patterns in the skies. Weymouth visitors were lucky to see this unusual display.

On His Majesty's second day with his Fleet, he goes to-- --sea in the aircraft carrier Courageous. Accompanied by the Prince of Wales and Prince George he witnesses--

--a new sight even for a King -- the amazing development of the air army of his Navy. There is certainly no more curious craft afloat than the two aircraft carriers. About the only semblance they have to a ship is that they float on the sea. Our flying Prince of Wales is very interested !

The ship's funnel is on the side of her deck and the deck itself--

--looks rather like a racecourse marked out for sprinting.

EFFECTS.

Not wishing to miss any new air experience the Prince of Wales--

--arranges to fly from the ship's deck for a change.
Those interested in promoting aviation--

--could not have had better allies than these two Royal brothers. Besides the two machines which carry his--

--sons His Majesty watched the launching of the whole squadron.
