EXILES COME HOME - 12,00 Scotsmen from America revisit their homeland under auspices of the Order of Scottish clans.

-Belfast Lough-

Picture:- On this liner entering Belfast Lough are twelve hundred-

--Scottish clansmen on their way to-- --visit Caledonia their home country. One of them--

--Jimmy Patterson, a plasterer from Brooklyn comes to collect an Irish-- --sweepstake prize of thirty thousand pounds. That's better than collecting threepenny pieces. To the--

--drums of the Pipes, the exiled Scots--

--receive a welcome to Britain's shores. Their children see the country of their-- --fathers for the first time. Have these clansmen forgotten how to dance the Fling? Not more than they have forgotten how to drink the favourite Scottish beverage - tea! This is just a preliminary rejoicing before sailing down the Clyde to Glasgow. Oh to be in at the-- --final celebrations! What a time they will have!

Hoots mon!
