

2290951

THE HOODED MEN - - Crusaders, attired in their picturesque cowled cloaks, attend divine service at Greyfriars Parish Church.

-Edinburgh-

---

Picture.:- The age of chivalry is not dead ! This striking ceremonial of the Holyrood Conclave of the Order of Crusaders is proof--

--of it. The cloaks they wear are not merely sensational. They are symbolic of the-- --freedom of all classes to enter--

--the Brotherhood. They are supposed to conceal any indication given by clothes as to whether a man--

--be rich or poor. One of their chivalrous works is--

--a service for blood transfusion. Almost every member of the--

--Order has given blood to sick and injured in the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. A gift worthy of "crusaders".