WEDDING IN THE CITY - - St. Bartholomew's-the-Great, one of England's oldest churches, is the setting for the wedding of Lord David Cecil to Miss Rachel MacCarthy.

Picture:- Under this lovely old archway, over which is a charming Elizabethan house will soon pass Lord David Cecil, and his bride.

The City seldom sees a wedding set in such a-- --historic and picturesque frame. The bride, Miss Rachel MacCarthy looks very attractive. Hello, a press photographer has pressed too close. His attentions are not welcome apparently. The Church of Saint Bartholomew--

--the Great in Smithfield, almost stifled by surrounding buildings, is one of the few churches of the district--

--which survived the Great Fire of London, although its vicissitudes have been many. The crypt has been used for a wine cellar, and the cloister for a stable. It has now been restored to its former dignity as a sacred edifice, and its precincts are respected. Happy should be the lovers who are wedded before its altar.
