On H.M.S. 'EAGLET', lying in dock at-- --Liverpool, the service of dedicating the new--
--R.N.V.R. Colours commences by running up the ship's flag.

Commodore Sir R. Williams-Bulkeley, K.C.B., is-- --present to accept the--
--new flags, which, by the way, have been specially designed by the Admiralty.

Thereafter, men of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve parade the new colours while the Commodore takes their salute. The object of the present R.N.V.R. Association is to succour the widows,--

--orphans and other dependants of those members who laid down their lives for their country in the late War. A great and worthy service, indeed !
