GARGLE PARADE - - Troops of Cowley Barracks adopt sensible means of protection against colds and throat infection.

-Oxford-

Picture.:- Keep your eye on these mugs ! The ones in their hands ! The Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry are about to-- --be instructed in the art and--

--practice of gargling. Regimental Sergeant-Major H.
Lay explains in the plain blunt--

--way of Sergeant-Majors, that soldiers should be sweet-mouthed, as well as--

--good-mannered. Don't dribble, man ! Gargle !
The Sergeant-Major--

--gently explains that the Army doesn't supply bibs and-- --tuckers. This drill is part of the soldier's course of training in personal hygiene.

When you next hear a soldier--

--say "Have a gargle ?" - - you will know just what he means.
