

MISS CHURCHILL'S WEDDING - - Crowds of excited woman and girls assemble outside St. Margaret's to see Mr. Winston Churchill's eldest daughter on her marriage to Mr. John Bailey.

-Westminster-

Picture.:- All the women of London seem to be here-- --to get a glimpse - - and it is a glimpse - - of Miss Diana Churchill as herself, and later on as Mrs John Bailey. Mr. Winston Churchill follows, but not so--

--shyly, or so hurriedly, as his eldest daughter.

The crowds get more satisfaction now when the happy couple emerge from the Church - - sorry, the battery of press cameras has caused them to stampede to another pathway out. The manoeuvre doesn't help much,--

--and the crowd surges forward like a sea. They will not be denied their sensation, so the-- --gauntlet has to be run, or rather walked--

--by the principals, and their retinue--

--of bridesmaids. The Police have some difficulty in--

--keeping back the excited onlookers. Mr.

--John Bailey, the lucky bridegroom, is the son of--

--Sir Abe Bailey, the South African millionaire. The reception--

--to be held at the Duke of Marlborough's house will naturally be one of the most brilliant of the season.
