

2-428/51

A NEW "ARETHUSA" - - Lady Tyrwhitt lays the keel plate of the seventh British warship to bear one of the most famous names in naval history.

-Chatham-

---

Picture:- The seventh "Saucy Arethusa" is -- --to have her first keel plate officially laid by Lady Tyrwhit. Admiral Sir Reginald Tyrwhit, you will remember, commanded the last "Arethusa" at the Heligoland--

--Battle and until she was sunk by a-- --German mine. His various adventurous exploits made him known as Tyrwhit of the--

--"Saucy Arethusa". Lady Tyrwhit is on the point--

--of pressing the contact button. (It is now done), which --starts the electric riveter driving the first rivet into the ship's keel.

The new cruiser will be five thousand, five hundred-tons-- --displacement. She will no doubt worthily uphold the glorious achievements of her predecessors.