ROYAL SYMPATHY WITH UNEMPLOYED - - H.R.H. Prince

George visits Middlesbrough to gain first-hand knowledge of social service for the workless.

-Yorkshire-

Picture.:- Many of the social service movements for unemployed received royal recognition when Prince George visited Middlesbrough to-day. His first call was--

--at the Junior Instruction Centre, where the youth of the district receives training of body--

--and mind. Each member is taught a trade. It is estimated that one--

--worker out of every six in the town is unemployed. It was this fact which gave Prince--

--George the desire to get first-hand information as to what--

--was being done. This posed picture was taken at Joe Walton's Boys' Club,--

--which was visited in the afternoon. His Royal Highness was loyally cheered as he passed the crowds which--

--lined the streets. Depression has not killed loyalty.
