

"WINNER TAKES ALL" - - Johnny King, British

bantam-weight boxing champion, beats Dave Crowley in fight for "the whole purse" at Belle Vue, Manchester.

Picture.:- The meeting between Johnny King of Manchester, and Dave Crowley of London, arranged for some weeks ago--

--was stopped by King getting 'flu. But now, the fight is on! In this battle, the winner is to take the whole purse. All the-- --loser will get is a hammering. Less embracing, and more fighting would liven things up a bit! King is the aggressor up to now.

Both down! King is up again waiting for Crowley to rise. The Manchester champion--

--shows the Cockney some whirl-wind tactics, and forces the pace without pause.

Crowley's on his knees again! The ref is counting. He's up! King's next-- --attack is a leap! Both feet off the ground, but Crowley--

--fights back pluckily. The principle of "winner take all" provides a powerful reason for boxers to go 'all out-- --for a victory. Looks like wrestling now, but it's still a boxing match. After fifteen rounds of it, the referee awards the fight--

--and the purse to Johnny King, and his sympathy to plucky Dave Crowley.
