HOME AT LAST Sturdy little vessel of Atlantic fishing fleet forced home by frigid gales off Newfoundland.

-Eston.U.S.A.-

Picture: It's been cold lately along the coast of Newfoundland, and stormy, too!

In fact so bad that this fishing vessel turned tail--

--and came home after only a few days work. The heavy seas dashed over the ship. The water froze--

--before it could drip away, and coated--

--the whole ship with a thick layer-- --of solid ice. For a Christmas-- --card picture, the ship looks marvellous. But-- --for living and working in, ^{well} it's chilly. All-- --the same they caught enough to fill--

--a few thousand fish kettles. Just-- --about enough--

--to pay for barrels of hot--

--drinks to thaw--

--the throats of the frozen crew
