Hospital School proceed on holiday prior to moving to new quarters at Holbrook, Suffolk.
-Greenwich-

Picture:- The boys of the Royal Hospital School, Greenwich, are having-- --a lovely time. They're moving, and they're-- --young enough to like anything new. Kits are packed and-- --ready for transhipment. But they are getting a-- --spot of holiday before-- --settling down in their new-- --home. The last parade and roll call-on the old ground !

See the old dryland training ship "FAME" in the background. The anchor is-- --weighed and the boys steam away on leave,. Holbrook, in Suffolk, where the new--

--school is situated, accommodates eleven-hundred and twenty souls, and the playing fields are healthy wide-- --open spaces. They have now cast off, and are doing a speed of knots in the direction-- --of their next port of call. Cheerio, chaps ! Happy days !
