Kid Berg, Stegney, versus Louis Saerens, the Belgian light-weight champion.

The first big Sunday open-air fight held in England.
Fifteen thousand people attend and testify to it making popular Sunday appeal. Berg adopts the tactics which made him such a tonic to American boxing 'fans'. His whirlwind attacks,--

--punching and swinging with both hands seem to puzzle
the Belgian, who hardly finds time to get a blow--

--in edgeways. There's battling Berg landing a hurricane of body punches.

The sound of the gong is welcome to both fighters.

The pace has been furious. Saerens is possibly a better--

--boxer than Berg, but he finds the Londoner's onslaughts almost impossible to check.(PAUSE).

The Belgian's stomach is getting crimson blotched by the tornado of heavy punches--

--from Berg's never still gloves. A punch connects-- --with Saerens's solar plexus,--

--and down he goes ! The Kid's supporters go crazy with-- --excitement. Berg has defeated the plucky Belgian in four furious rounds.
