Picture.:-

Representing His Majesty the King, Field-Marshal The Duke of Connaught arrives at the-- --Royal Military College, Sandhurst, to present new Colours to the Battalion of--

--Gentlemen Cadets. The old Colours were--

--personally presented by His Majesty in 1913 and have done service for twenty-years. These now faded--

--Colours - - record of sacrifice made during the Great War - - are marched off parade for the last time,--

--to be deposited in the old College Building.

(EFFECTS).

The new Colours are consecrated by the Chaplain General to the Forces - - The Reverend E.H.--

--Thereold. These colours radiantly fresh and glittering in the sunshine are presented by Field-Marshal The Duke of Connaught who mentions his pride at being instructed by the King to do so. With a fatherly gesture from the 'Grand Old Man of the Army', the Colour bearers rise--

--and the Duke moves off to the saluting base, while the Colours--

--are marched into position at the centre of the line for the march-past.
