ALBERSHOTT TATTOO - - Fifty-six thousand children witness the only full-dress daylight performance of the army's great show.

-Hampshire-

Picture:- A glimpse at what is probably one of the world's greatest--

--organised displays. Fifty-six thousand children's heads--

--turn at the arrival of the adored little Princess Elizabeth and her mother, the Duchess of York.

The Gordon Highlanders and the Second Battalion Queens Own Cameron Highlanders give a highland display.

There's hardly one of these 56,000 kiddies--

--who isn't fascinated by this massed waggie o' the kilt, as Harry--

--Lauder called it, not excluding the littlest royal--

--lady, who is to-day one with them, and of them,

The Cavalry musical ride and artillery drive. In these items are troops of the 5th--

--Iniskilling Dragoons, the 3rd Carabiniers, the Royal Horse Artillery, the Queens Own Hussars, and the Royal Lancers. That movement is the concentric circle of cavalry and guns.

A wonderfully realistic presentation of the Battle of Omdurman of 1898. The Dervishes attacked at daybreak. They are brave to rashness,--

--but the British forces are prepared, and not a fussy-wuxky reaches--

--Zeraba. (EFFECTS).

The Sirdar orders the advance, and the victorious troops commence to march on Omdurman.

But the biggest emotional thrill of all is this final hymn.
