

ROSES IN THE RAIN - Despite weeping skies Scarborough contrives to present charming scenes at Rose Queen Festival.
- Yorkshire -

Picture: The retiring Rose Queen of Scarborough leads the way for the-- --approach of the Queen elect for 1933. Nothing^{other} than this pretty floral ceremony could better prove-- --summer has really arrived. Children of the ballet, light as air, strew the Queen's path with scented rose-- --petals. Miss Joan Brady is this year's make believe majesty. PAUSE. Anticipation of the lofty dignity of a throne is making her cheeks glow with excitement--

--and now little Joan attains the full status^e of a Queen, complete with crown.

This bunch of frilly charm is called Victorian Vanities.

All is wonderful except the weather. What a day !

If the bloom on cheeks and lips can stand this downpour it--

--must be waterproof as well as kissproof!

EFFECTS.

Showers of roses thrown by dainty hands make the rain--

--almost pleasant, but nonetheless damp. Never mind Scarborough, its always--

--fine tomorrow and the rain does freshen up things so !
