The Gentlemen Yeoman of the ~~King's~~ King's Bodyguard march to the garden of St. James's Palace, ---

--- where the Duke of Connaught--who has just this moment arrived, is to---- ----inspect them. The Duke is in full dress uniform of a Field Marshal, while the Yeoman wear their---- ---ever picturesque Tudor uniforms. This Bodyguard draws its members from old --- ---soldiers with distinguished war services. Several with whom he chats are evidently recognised by the Duke. ---

--- His Royal Highness also gives the King's Indian o rd rlies a vigorous handshake----

Its little wonder that whenever such an inspection as this takes place, hundreds --- ----of sightseers gather outside the precincts of the Palace. The Beefeaters are always a sure draw---

----the old English historical atmosphere will never lose its romance ---

-----some Boy Scouts also parade before the Duke. To-- ----one of these, Douglas Parker, he presents the King's Scout medal. ----

EFFECTS CROWD.

---Pride needn't be a sin with Scout Douglas Parker----

---This colourful ceremony delighted Princess Elizabeth last year---

----I remember, but this time she is not present----

The-D- The March past--the Duke takes the salute, and that ends, for one more--- year the Royal Inspection of the Yeomen of England.
