The Northern Command Tattoo opens auspiciously. Thousands of school children, and other children--
--who left school about forty years ago are here shrieking--
--with delight and applauding much too vigourously for--
--such hot weather.(PAUSE).

This episode recalls in vivid spectacle the capture of Fort Moro--
--in the West Indies. At the original assault 170 years ago, the East Yorkshires bore the brunt of the attack.

Gun fire shakes up the kiddies a bit, but what a thrill it all is!

Soldiering appears to be a daring, romantic and--
--picturesque adventure. Of course, some of us know that it is not always so picturesque, nor so romantic, as this.

A very successful tattoo ! Produced entirely by a serving officer Lieutenant-Colonel--
--Douglas Whithers, M.C., whom we congratulate.
