

DRAG HOUNDS' DERBY - - The famous Epsom racecourse is the scene of an unusual "Derby", the competitors being hounds of the Mid-Surrey Drag.

Picture.:-

A really important Epsom race-course engagement. Stanley Wootton is--

--the host and Prince George is a Royal guest, amongst members of the Disabled--

--Ex-Service Men's Association. The hounds go to the post--

--and they're off ! All the animals are disguised under the names of Derby runners. But they're actually the Mid-Surrey Drag Hunt hounds. The show is staged--

--by race horse owners, trainers and jockeys. Rounding Tattenham Corner, as to the manner born. Following an aniseed scent. Pity you can't smell this film--

--as well as hear it. You would get the idea better ! "HARINIERO", the Irish Derby winner takes his--

--time. 'King Salmon' and Raymond are walking it out like sweethearts. The judges stand by to swear to,--

--or at the winner. And there he is ! 'Raymond', still trying to track down the invisible bait.

Prince George is much amused by the novel Derby.

And the prize ! (A yard of tripe or something similar) turns every drag hound into a gluttonous hound.

When the winner is led in, the others follow to--

--see fair play and get anything there's going.

The victor, Raymond, full of the prize. Sore footed but satisfied.
