CADETS ON PARADE - H.R.H. Prince George pays a flying visit to the camp of the Public Secondary Schools' Cadet Association.

-Gloucester-

Picture:- In these days, a flying visit really means a flying visit !

Prince George has flown from Hendon to Cirencester to visit and inspect the Public Secondary Schools' Cadet Association. Its members are camping here at the Earl of Bathurst's seat, Cirencester Park. Parked in the park, as it were !

The Prince addresses the Cadets. The informality of his talk is shown by the fact-- --that the cadets - - ,there are altogether one thousand officers and men present - - just sit round on the-- --grass and listen to the words of His Royal Highness.

The Cadets are further favoured by the attendance of Field-Marshal Lord Allenby, President of their Association, who--

--received the Prince on arrival. (EFFECTS).

The Royal Visitor's sincerely spoken message is received with much enthusiasm.

After the customary three cheers for His Royal Highness,--

--an impressive march past takes place. These Cadets are all young men, some-- --very young for a warrior's uniform - - who spend a part of their holidays from School in this healthy outdoor life. The visit of-- --Prince George has given the event an enthusiastic-- --fillip. Colonel R. Pearson, Camp Commandant, is to be congratulated. Camp life is fine, when it's fine !
