

LILIAS DAY - - One of Scotland's most colourful festivals filmed for the first time.

-Kilbarchan-

Picture:-

The revival of Lilies Day at Kilbarchan, Scotland, again awakens stories of saints and sinners, minstrels and lovely ladies. This piper--

--represents one yeleft Habbie Simpson, a singer of songs, a noted wit--

--and a man of muscle, all rolled into one.

The day was named after Lilies, the beautiful daughter of Baron Cunningham. The day was--

--once called Beltane Fair, but the old Baron said it was to be Lilies Day and--

--Lilies Day it was. To-day the Baron and others--

--from the past centuries again walk its village streets. The girls took up more width than, than they do nowadays. Hoop la ! There's Lilies herself !

The Pageant is a great success.

It puts Kilbarchan on the map. I have looked it up, and it's certainly there right enough !
