Cuba starts to pack up her troubles.

Machine-guns are beginning to disappear from the street corners. The new President arrives--

--at the capital to meet--

--members of the new provisional government. They have been called together--

--to discuss some of the Island--

--Republic's most pressing problems. The country's finances are--

--in a terrible mess. The crippling international debt must be--

--dealt with at once. (CHEERS).

--wipe out injustice, graft and bad government. Cuban gunboats stand by for action,--

--and two American destroyers ride at anchor further out,--

--waiting for the 'All Quiet.'
