"WAR" IN HAMPSHIRE -- Universal cameramen "go into action" with troops engaged in exercises under direction of the Southern Command.

-Salisbury Plain-

Picture:-

War is in the air in Hampshire to-day. It's Whiteland against Brownland.

Or in other words, the first Cavalry Brigade --
--versus the Second Cavalry Brigade. Both armies are mecanised--
--to a very great extent. Many of the guns being tractor hauled.

But horses, as well as men, take part in the war game.
A pleasant enough game, too, when it's made for practise,--
--but the reality is the messiest mess that ever soiled human hands.

Still, messes have to be cleaned up, and these are the boys--

--and machines to tackle the heavy--

--end of the job. The advance has been sounded, and detachments of the Brownland Army--

--rush to attack the position indicated.

They immediately engage the enemy with rifle fire.

Whiteland ^{defence} reply--

--with equal vigour and noise.

Tanks and guns go up to support and--

--engage the opposing forces.

I haven't the slightest idea who is winning, but there's-- --an awful lot of dumb shells going from either side, and the operations have given great satisfaction to the higher Command.
